

Arianna Day - Voice Instructor

Arianna Day, a Wisconsin native, started studying music at a young age. Born into a musical family, Arianna played several instruments throughout her childhood, fostering a love for music. Arianna holds a Bachelor in Music from Viterbo University, where she studied with Dr. Ann Schoenecker. While at Viterbo University, Arianna participated in several ensembles, often serving as a section leader and mentor to younger students. Along with taking advantage of every opportunity to perform on stage, Arianna pursued research on composer Libby Larsen, which resulted in an opportunity to present at the National Convention of Undergraduate Research. Also while a student, Arianna worked diligently to provide her peers with several opportunities to work with great masterclass technicians in both classical and contemporary vocal techniques through the university's SNATS chapter. She has competed and advanced in competitions such as Schubert Club, Classical Singer, and NATS. Arianna has professional experience in both classical and contemporary vocal styles, which has led to her belief that all students should have a strong musical base in classical technique before exploring other colors of their voice. Arianna currently works as an Event Coordinator in La Crosse, WI, and is enthusiastic about providing young students with an environment to grow and nourish their love for music.
